

Pastured Poultry

(A Chicken with a different lifestyle)

Raised on pasture and supplemental grain
No antibiotic, hormone or arsenic additives

Locally produced

non-gmo corn used in our chickens

We're good to them – they're good to Free Range pastured poultry are free to comb the pastures at will, to spread fertilizer and peck the bugs and grubs. Since the birds get much more exercise they get better muscle tone. Since the muscle is what we eat, there is a difference in the texture of the meat. Free-Range meat is "denser" and less "mushy" yet smooth and tender when properly aged.

A Little Bit About Us

Ron and Jolene have lived in St. Charles County all of their life, both coming from farm backgrounds. We have two grown boys, Don, who is working in St. Louis County after graduating from college in Rolla and Kyle, who is an engineer working for the National Renewable Energy Lab.

We have been raising hogs and cattle for 25 years. When Jolene's father passed away in 1997 we took over the egg business that her parents had run, selling a small amount of farm fresh eggs from the door of our home.

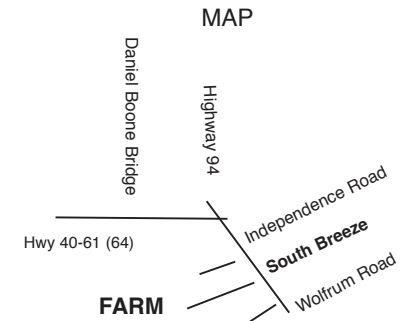

All pork and beef are raised humanely. Both breeding herds live on pasture. The cows are allowed to give birth in the pasture. The hogs farrow in roomy straw-filled pens or outside if weather permits. Sub-therapeutic antibiotics or artificial growth stimulants are not used

We have always been aware of our environment and have never embraced the high tech methods of producing animals. Cringing at the thought, we felt we had to adapt to this new technology in order to compete. However, it was not the way we felt comfortable raising animals. We decided to completely follow our convictions and pull out the few antibiotics we did use, made a commitment to enhance our low tech production methods, and continue to develop more environmentally friendly practices.

The result is the offering you see here. We are a part of the sustainable agriculture movement that is currently developing a grass roots following. We hope to help provide people with a cleaner, healthier food and environment, and in the process promote the FAMILY farm.
